The Gift of Legal Security - An Inspired Gift Idea

Even if you don't need to buy a wedding present fit for a (future) King, as was the dilemma for the guests at the Royal Wedding earlier this year, most people will be in need of a wedding gift or two over the coming months, as recent research shows that 99% of people attend at least 1 wedding per year.<sup>1</sup>

The issue is then what would the happy couple like to receive and what would you like to give them? The same research showed that nearly half of couples would most like to be given money or vouchers.<sup>2</sup>

It seems that a practical gift is top of the list for couples who in the current economic climate need as much help as possible to set up home and arrange some of the formalities of married life.

This month the LawStore in The Glades, Bromley has launched an inspired gift voucher scheme, to help with such gift dilemmas and provide a useful, practical gift for newly married couples and other people who would appreciate a legal services gift. The vouchers can be used for any of the legal services provided in LawStore (excluding family law) and could be particularly helpful to newly weds who could put them towards making a Will or Conveyancing on a new home.

“What could be more thoughtful than the gift of legal security” says David Green, managing director of LawStore. “It is often difficult to think of a useful wedding present so these are the perfect, practical gift. They could also be a great gift for other occasions such as retirement and exam success.”

“We’ve always intended the LawStore to provide legal services in a new, unique and accessible way to the people of Bromley and we hope the LawStore vouchers are an inspiration for all sorts of gift occasions.”

Packaged attractively, LawStore gift vouchers are available in £25, £50 and £100 denominations and are available and redeemable only at LawStore in the Glades from Friday 24th June.
